

Chad Manley

Bachelor of Community Design Honours Student
Dalhousie School of Planning

Chad entered into the planning world upon discovering Dalhousie's Bachelor of Community Design program (BCD). After his studies in environmental and political sciences in Vancouver and Edmonton, studying in Halifax at the School of Planning seemed to be a natural choice, as it provided a balance between policy, design and ecology - all things he was interested in. This fall, Chad will head into his 4th and final year of the BCD Honours degree program.

Academically, his interests lie in sustainable waste and energy systems, water management, and the integration of ecosystem habitats into urban fabrics. Outside of school, Chad enjoys sailing, mountain biking, creating music, and coaching ski racing.
